The Network of European Museum Organisations (NEMO) invites you to apply for a 1-day training on "Participation for Wellbeing" hosted by Fondazione Brescia Musei and organized in collaboration with Prof. Pierluigi Sacco, Professor at the IULM University of Milan. The training is one element of a nine-part discussion series "Open doors. The participatory museum today". Scientific evidence is confirming that culture can have very positive effects on psychological and physical wellbeing. Museums can therefore also become spaces where people can enjoy a sense of wellbeing.

Some NEMO members will be selected to join the discussion on "Wellbeing and Healing" in Brescia, Italy, on September 28 and receive a travel grant for this purpose. Besides the lecture, selected participants will learn more about the Brescia Museums Foundation while being invited to guided museum tours, lunch with the director, and an open session with staff from the Learning Departments of the museums.
